PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

With over 14 years experience including utility system design, drainage/stormwater management system design, cost estimating, preparing technical reports, and serving as field engineer, Matt has managed successful design oriented projects in the land development, airport design, environmental remediation, floodplain analysis, roadway design, and railroad improvement sectors.

Matt has procured contracts, designed, and managed civil development projects for public and private sector industries. His field experience in observing construction practices and stormwater management best management practices on projects in which he designed has enabled him to develop a strong skill of identifying constructability issues during the design phase of a project. This experience is an asset in helping to identify constraints and determining effective solutions early in the design phase of a project. In addition, Matt has the unique ability to develop civil design solutions that are fully coordinated to be integrated with the aesthetic design elements to meet the project's objectives.
